In 2014, Warren Mosler was the recipient of the Franklin University Switzerland Honorary Degree in recognition of his contributions to the field of economics and for his ability to combine entrepreneurial spirit with his being an outstanding intellectual dedicated to serving the public purpose: "a straightforward person of the highest integrity and one of the sharpest minds." It's now time for Warren to serve his homeland.

Andrea Terzi

Professor of Economics
Franklin University
Lugano, Switzerland

I have known Warren Mosler for around 25 years and have built a close relationship with him and his family. Warren is one of those single-minded treasures that thinks of things 'out of the box' and encourages and stimulates creative thinking in others. He has been a successful player in the financial markets and has a deep technical understanding of that world. He also has one of the most incisive minds when it comes to understanding how monetary systems actually operate and what capacities various levels of government have within those systems.

While those intellectual capacities are necessary, in my view, to equip a person for a role in government, they are not sufficient. What Warren brings in addition to his technical competence is a deep compassion and generosity for the underdog in society and he has proposed novel solutions to improve their material outcomes in many countries. He is well-known around the world in policy circles for these creative policy positions. The combination of technical competence and compassion is often lacking in those that go into official government position.

Warren has also always expressed to me that he is attached to the local affairs and issues in St Croix and sees his residential status there as being important in that regard. He would make a great Governor for all citizens in the USVI.

William Mitchell

Professor of Economics
Director, Centre of Full Employment and Equity
University of Newcastle
Australia

I've worked with Warren Mosler for a quarter of a century to help create an economics that actually helps us to solve real world problems. I've known a lot of famous economists—including a number of those who won the Nobel Prize—but I learned more about the way the real world economy works from Warren than I did from most of them. I've visited Warren many times and I know that his passion for the Virgin Islands is real. With his commitment to the islands and with his superior understanding of the economic challenges faced--and of the policy solutions to problems--Warren is the obvious choice to help put the economic house in order.

L. Randall Wray, Professor of Economics, Bard College, and Senior Scholar, Levy Economics Institute

Warren Mosler is a world-renowned expert on public finance. His widely-influential contributions, based on long practical experience in financial markets and deep understanding of the monetary system, have shaken the field of economics to its core. Warren's work has paved the way to improving the lives of many in ways that were previously thought to be out-of-reach by the economics profession.

Warren's ideas have influenced the work of U.S. Congress, the European Commission, and other global institutions. In the case of Argentina, they resulted in one of the largest and most successful jobs programs in the modern era. Warren has dedicated the last several decades to developing concrete proposals for using the public purse for the public good--from innovative banking reform to pro-growth tax policies to proposals for good jobs for the unemployed. Warren possesses an uncanny clarity of thought, original problem-solving skills and, most importantly, a strong moral compass. A very successful entrepreneur,

Warren has chosen not to retire comfortably, but instead to commit himself to working for the common good.

I cannot think of a more technically capable and dedicated person to hold public office and to be entrusted with the public's finances.
